“What time is it?” he asked me, as he took his seat in his favorite chair.

Without thinking, I reached in my pocket and took out the chain—without, of course, any watch on the end of it. “My watch was

Chapter 3 The Angel of Music

Christine Daaé did not immediately continue her triumph at the Opera. After that famous night, she sang only once. It seemed that she was no longer in control of her life. I believe Christine Daaé was frightened by what had happened to her. I have a letter of hers from this period: “I don’t know myself when I sing,” wrote the poor child. The viscount, Raoul Chagny, tried unsuccessfully to see her. He wrote to her and desperately waited for her reply. When it came, he read:

Monsieur:

I have not forgotten the little boy who went into the sea to rescue my scarf. I am going to Perros-Guirec, where my father is buried with his violin. You knew my father and he was very fond of you. I will go to the graveyard of the little church where we used to play as children. And where we said goodbye for the last time.

Viscount Chagny hurried to the train station. He read Christine’s note again and again, and

A Note About the Author and Life in the Nineteenth Century

Jane Austen was born on 16th December, 1775 at Steventon, Hampshire – a county¹ in the south of England. Jane's father was a clergyman² in the church at Steventon. Jane had six brothers – James, George, Edward, Henry and Charles – and one sister – Cassandra. Jane Austen's father made sure that his children had a good education. Jane learnt French, Italian and music. She studied English literature and poetry.
